THE SEASON

WEHLE
Epee

WITH the season only half over, this is no time to judge the merits of the fencing team. It has great potentialities, which should bear fruit in the coming intercollegiate championships. Giddings, the Army sabre man, casually won the National Junior Championship between classes, one might say. And Sands, intercollegiate champion of Epee in 1927, tied for fifth place in the National matches. Then Heiss and Quill have been defeating all comers, and are expected to go far in the following meets. Brownlee is a dangerous man with foil, and can always be relied upon. So you see we have some great men on the squad.

What few meets we have fenced this season have been, for the most part, with professional clubs. This gives the squad invaluable experience, but it necessitates hanging up several defeats. Of three starts against professionals, the team has won one, defeating the Saltus Club 12-7.
