Navy Takes College Epee Title And Leads for 3-Weapon Crown

Middies Have 4-Point Edge Over N. Y. U., Which Wins in Foil 3d Year in Row

New York University took the Little Iron Man Trophy for the third straight year last night in the sixty-second annual Intercollegiate Fencing Association championships with an outstanding team performance in the foils competition.

Navy, however, managed to hold on to a slim 4-point lead in the struggle for the three-weapon title. The midshipmen, winners of the epee crown earlier in the day with 26 points, added 21 more in the foils division for a total of 47.

N. Y. U., which scored a disappointing 15 points in the epee, was brilliant in foils. The Violet team of Gene Glazer, Martin Davis and Herman Goldstein, recorded twenty-eight victories in thirty bouts for an over-all total of 43 points.

Two Are Undefeated

Glazer, a sophomore, and Davis, a senior who has been on all three winning teams in this event, went through their schedule of ten bouts undefeated.

Goldstein, another sophomore, suffered the only two defeats but qualified for the individual foils today in Pool 3 with an 8-2 record. Glazer and Davis, of course, qualified easily in Pools 1 and 2, respectively.

It marked N. Y. U.'s best won-and-lost record in the three years it has taken the Little Iron Man prize, the oldest trophy in intercollegiate competition.

In third place, behind Navy and the Violets, were Princeton and Columbia, both with 37 points. The Tigers tallied 18 in finishing third in the epee and 19 in the same spot in the foils. The Lions had 21 in epee and 16 in foils.

The two-day tournament at the Concourse Plaza Hotel in the Bronx will end today with the saber team competition in the morning and individual championships in the afternoon and evening. Eleven teams are participating.

Foss and Metz Win

Yale and Cornell were the only teams to win bouts from N. Y. U. in the foils. Until Ed Foss of the Elis stopped Goldstein, the Violets had won seventeen consecutive bouts. Steve Metz of Cornell was the other victor over Goldstein.

Other individual foils qualifiers were Joseph Paletta, Navy, and Alonzo Johnson, City

College, in Pool 1 and Frank Larsen, Navy, in Pool 2.

In epee, Navy's performance was almost as shining as that of the Violets in the foil. The middies lost only four bouts. They also had two undefeated fencers in Roland Wommack and Larry Riley.

Their third man, Hubert Strachwitz suffered the four defeats and failed to qualify for the individual round. His six victories contributed handsomely, however, to Navy's winning total.

Andre Deladrier, the Navy coach, said the epee trio "exceeded all my expectations." Deladrier, son of Navy's head coach from 1927 to 1948, Clovis Deladrier, took over the head coaching reins last year from Joe Fiens. The latter guided Navy to successive three-weapon titles in 1956 and 1957.

Wommack, who makes his home in Philadelphia, registered his ten straight victories in Pool 1 and qualified easily for today's individual competition.

Riley's undefeated skein was a pleasant surprise to Coach Deladrier. The Evansville, Ind., youth fenced in Pool 3 and also qualified for the individual bouts.

Strachwitz, from Reno, Nev., finished fourth in Pool 2 and failed to qualify. His six victories, however, contributed handsomely to Navy's winning cause.

For the first time in the history of the intercollegiate tournament, the foils competition—team and individual—is being fenced by electrical touches.
